By using a clothesline or a drying rack you can reduce energy consumption and greenhouse gas emissions even further. Clothes dryers use a lot of energy, while hanging your clothes uses none. Using the sun's natural energy by line-drying your laundry is a cost-effective way to conserve energy.

The Kjeragbolten Rock
In southwestern Norway, in the village of Lystad, you can find the Kjeragbolten creating its dramatic landscape. This particular formation results from forces of nature over millions of years such as ice masses, glacial movements, erosion, river flow, and other weather phenomena. This geological marvel is a sight to see, gradually created the U-shaped valleys and deep folds that are typical of the area.

Vitamin D for Baby and Mom

Program or breast-feeding women require sufficient amounts of vitamin D, which is vital for bone health. Breastfed babies may not get adequate levels of this important nutrient. Without sufficient vitamin D, bones can become thin and brittle. This can lead to osteoporosis in adults and rickets in children. While we can get vitamin D naturally from the sun it is not always possible, so supplementing is recommended and available in forms for both mother and child.

Norman Rockwell produced over forty covers for Literary Digest, including this study which appeared on September 24, 1921. Rockwell loved to paint boys and their relationship to their elders. This illustration captures the loving patience of the old man and concentrated anticipation of the lad.
