MAGNUS

A Mid-Life Crisis

An animal is said to go through metamorphosis when it undergoes a dramatic physical transformation after birth. Monarch butterflies have four distinct stages. First they start off as an egg before hatching into a worm-like larva. In the larval stage it'll show a mix of green, yellow, and black. The most famous metamorphosis this species goes through is when it turns into a butterfly. This is a complete change from the caterpillar stage. The body shape is different, the legs are gone, and the wings are a completely different shape and color. The caterpillar stage is just a few examples of animals that undergo metamorphosis.

Money can buy you a fine dog, but only love can make him wag his tail.

Yorkshire Terrier Despite their small size, Yorkshire Terriers are bold and feisty little dogs. They shouldn't be taken lightly, contrary to their reputation as an urban lapdog. Their origins are in mink and mouse hunting in North America and often number one in major cities. Yorkshire Terriers are a "high-maintenance" breed, meaning that they do not require a lot of grooming as other breeds do. However, since they don't shed they require regular haircuts. Without these Yorkshire Terriers look much up to her best look!

Alpine ibex

The most elusive ibex's most distinct feature is his long, curved horns. They measure between 25-30 inches (65-75 cm) and are used to compete with other males for territory and mating rights as well as to fend off predators. However, they are sensitive to climate and weather, especially to a sharp drop in their primary source of food. The ibex has been found between the tree and shrub lines with males tending to live at higher elevations than females.

They stay at higher elevations during the day but will come to lower altitudes during the evening and at night when food is scarce. In North America, ibexes, kudu, and antelope. While populations were once widespread to central America in Italy and France, the ibex has been reintroduced to Germany, Switzerland, Slovenia, Austria and Bulgaria.

Concentrate on hitting the green.
The cup will come to you.

When you do see an opportunity to score a birdie or better, this says the obvious: take it. You've designed your course to reward the green with the green. With that in mind, the most important part of putting a ball is a solid putt on the green. To make sure you're landing on the green for your second shot, you want to generally aim for the center of the green, however, if there is a water hazard or another trap on the green, aim your shot so that it will miss the trap and you can take a second shot. Target the back half of the green as well since the majority of the time you will take the ball imperfectly leaving a shot of a par.

Roger Terry (1921-2009)

Airman for Equality

While African American pilots had proven themselves excellent fighter pilots, the 477th Bombardment Group, the first Black bomber group, was met with open hostility. Segregation was rampant: official military policy said it was still a reality in the Tuskegee Army Airfield where the 477th was stationed with Black officers being barred from the "white" club. The issue came to a head when U.S. Navy and several other group officers organized a protest, resulting in a total of 100 men, most of a time into the clubhouse. The incident was a court-martial had seen U.S. Terry, despite being defended by Captain Eugene "Doc" Justice Thompson (Marine), fired, reduced in rank and eventually discharged. While the incident is now being used to highlight the history of the Tuskegee Army, Terry lived with a stain on his record until 1986 when President Clinton pardoned him.
